

Big Bart and The Legend of The Silverton-Durango Train

w/m D. Cooper Getschal & K. Gilmore

Bart and the Gang were cowboys by day roaming all over the range
At night they played music and sang sad songs
But Bart felt it was time for a change

So he worked up a plan too simple to fail. Such riches they all would obtain.
The Gang listened closely to every detail to rob the Silverton-Durango Train

That narrow gage rail-line so steady and true
Passing through dang'rous terrain
Winding through the mountains without protection
Cause to rob it would be insane

Bart and the Gang mounted their horses that cold and windy night
They set their sights on a dimly lit spot and prepared to put up a fight

That narrow gage rail-line so steady and true
Thru mountains and valleys it sped
Gliding on tracks into the darkness not knowing what lay ahead

One shot rang out to stop the train but the engineer just wouldn't back down
He laid on the throttle and then blew his whistle to wake all the folks in the town

Bart knew the sheriff could hear the commotion
And he'd quickly be there at the rail
So they decided to let the train pass instead of rotting in jail

That narrow gage rail-line so steady and true had thwarted Big Bart's attack
And since that night there's been apprehension passing that part of the track

And to this day the mystery lingers cause the passengers all heard the loud bang
Nobody ever discovered the truth about Big Bart and his gang

After that night the boys changed their ways
The lesson they learned wasn't planned
They retired their guns and picked up guitars
Now it's Big Bart and the band

That narrow gage rail-line still rolls on today everyone's heard of it's fame
And the infamous story of how no one can stop
The Silverton Durango Train. No one has ever been able to stop
